

Sustainability at Higher Education Institutions: develop – network – report

HOCH^N: Network

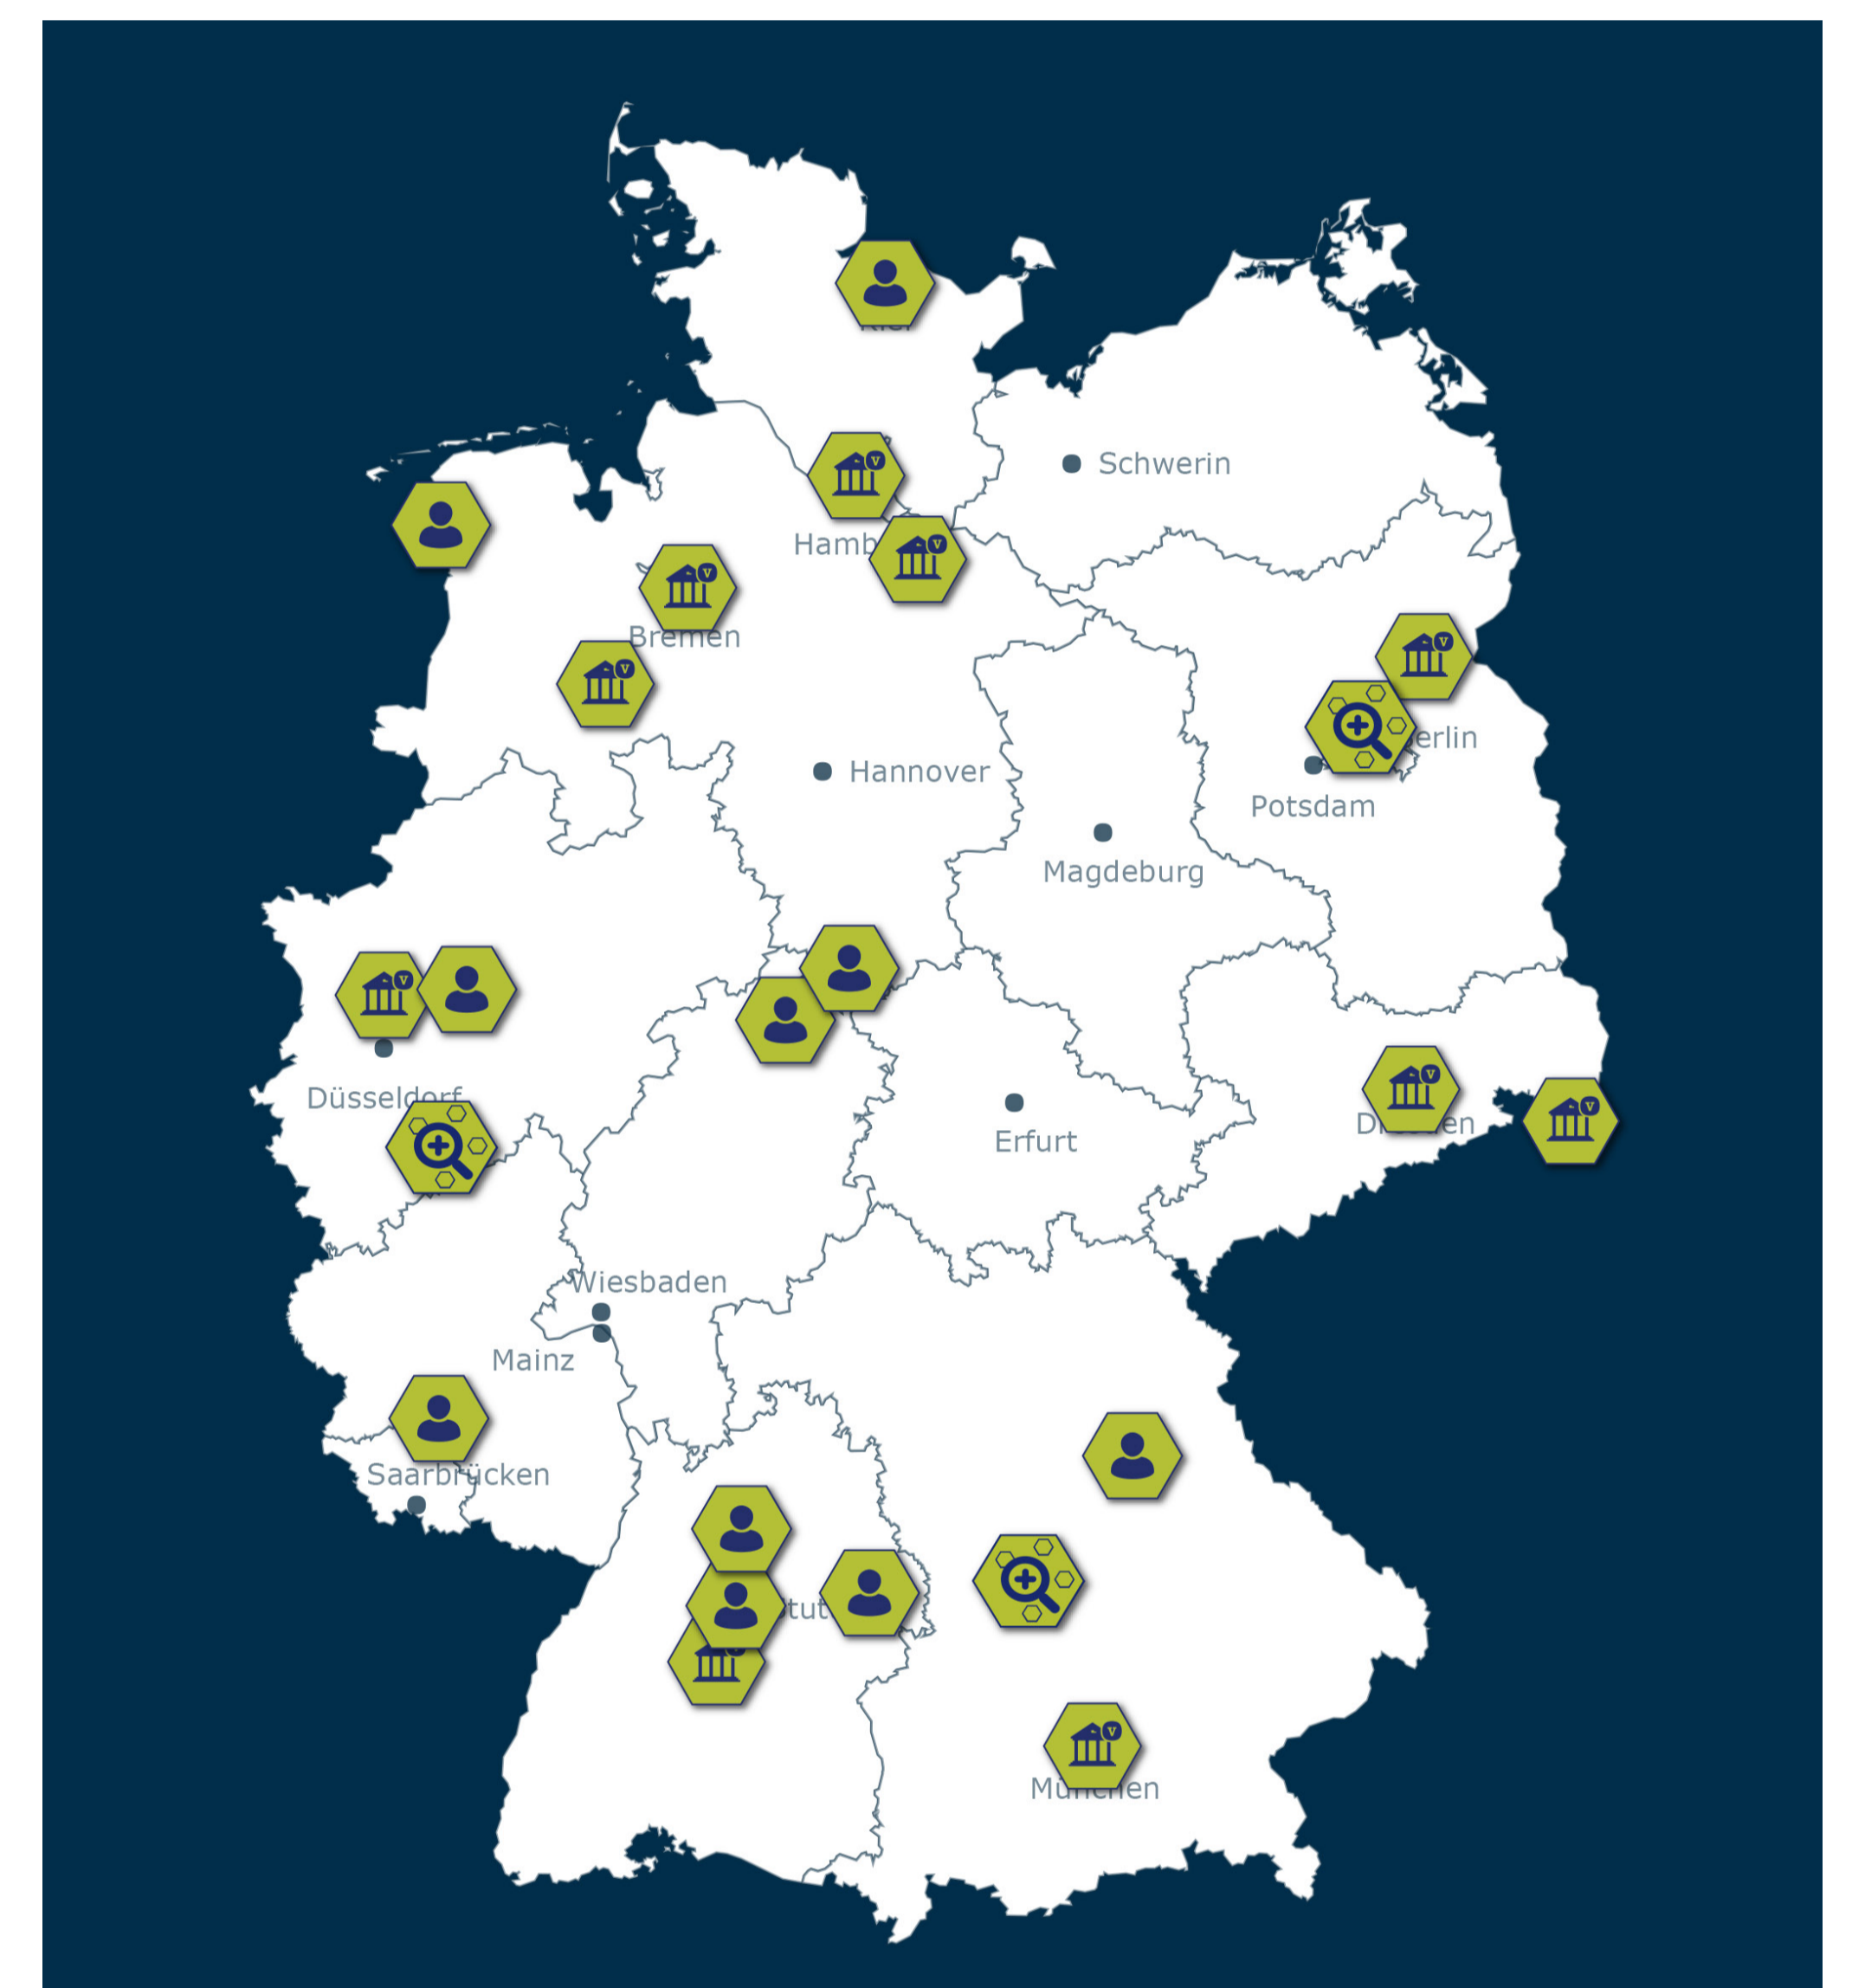

A programme-based network for sustainable development at Higher Education Institutions (HEI) in Germany is created within the scope of the HOCH^N project. Organization, development, promotion and evaluation of this community are the tasks of the network working package. New partners and partner institutions will be integrated and as a meta-network HOCH^N is also connecting national and international sustainability networks in the higher education landscape.

The HOCH^N map

As an initial point for a sustainable higher education landscape, the HOCH^N network with its partners extends across Germany and connects people and institutions who are part of the project by being vocal, active and assuming responsibility for it. With you as a new partner, we can expand the HOCH^N map with green combs and strengthen our network for a sustainable development at Higher Education Institutions.

You can either become a partner for a sustainable higher education landscape (single person) or join as a partner institution (whole institution) and benefit from our prospering network. As a network of partners, HOCH^N enables collaborative learning and collegial advice and, furthermore, it's not just inter- but also transdisciplinary: partners from industry, politics and society are involved and integrated in our research and projects.

Goals

- Expand the HOCH^N network to the targeted number of 100 HEI's (about one quarter of the German higher education landscape)
- Interconnect with national and international sustainability networks
- Use network-related communication tools, e.g. an innovation platform for interchanging knowledge according to the HOCH^N goals
- Application and advancement of network-management and network-evaluation methods
- Hosting a regular Network-Day on a yearly basis as a key possibility to get connected with other participants of the network. The Network-Day 2017 was a core component of the Hamburg Sustainable Development Summit. The second Network-Day will take place in Bremen in September 2018
